

Abstract

A solid electrical capacitor having lowered ESR and fewer short circuit from processing is obtained by adhering a number of islands of a material more basic than the dielectric coating on an anode before forming a conductive polymer on the dielectric coating by a chemical oxidation process.